Good Morning,

Here are the most recent updates as of the morning of Monday, March 23rd:

- Dr. Janice Fitzgerald announced three new cases of COVID-19 in Newfoundland and Labrador Sunday. All three new cases are in the Eastern Health region. Two of the cases are related to international travel. That brings the total number of cases in the province to nine, with five cases presumed positive in the last two days. 970 people have now been tested in the province, with 961 of those cases being negative. If you'd like to read more about this, please click here.
- As you know, we have been in contact with CDSPI regarding their Triple Guard insurance and have been told that they are still working on this and understand the urgency. We will continue to connect with them and keep you all updated on their decisions moving forward. Click here for the most recent memo from CDSPI's President, Mr. Ed Dermit.
- Henry Schein has recently provided a status report: supply chain and practical information to help you manage your practices and clinics in this challenging time.
- There continue to be many uncertainties surrounding COVID-19 and we understand the impact that this can have on one's mental health. MAP has now created a specific webpage on their site that include their resources related to COVID-19. If you'd like to view their resources for tips on social distancing, keeping yourself and others safe, please click here.
 - If you are brought to the main page, you can find the resources by typing in NLDA and you will see the link to their resources on their main page.

We understand your frustrations and concerns during this time and want you to know that the NLDA is working tirelessly to get you the information and answers you need.

We will continue to keep you updated.

Kind Regards,

Dr. Paul Hurley
President
NLDA
